Q: curl post php not returning json format I've been working on this for a few days now and I've hit a brick wall. I'm trying to curl a login form, that's been made with javascript using the header('Content-Type: application/json; charset=utf-8'); line. I managed to get this form working so that when I press submit, the log in form appears, but as soon as I press submit, I get the entire content of a.php file. So the content type comes back as text/html instead of application/json. Here's the code:

$username = $_POST['username']; $password = $_POST['password']; $url = ""; $loginUrl = $url.'admin/authenticate.php'; $postData = "username=$username&password=$password"; $options = array('http' => array( 'header' => "Content-type: application/json; charset=utf-8\r " ) ); $context = stream_context_create($options); $result = json_decode(curl_exec($context),true); echo "Username: ". $username. "\r "; echo "Password: ". $password. "\r "; echo "Result: ". $result. "\r ";

All the echo's get printed on my screen, the username is displayed as "", and the password as " I'm certain it's something simple I've done wrong

ISS is a place where humans live and work in complete isolation from the earth... It's amazing! But all good things must come to an end. Therefore, the International Space Station crew will be returning to earth in a year. How cool would it be to travel at over 20k miles per hour, to the ground at about 500 miles per hour, and to skip through the atmosphere like a skydiver? Today we're going to talk about the orbital path of International Space Station (ISS) and how it could be captured in skydiver. A skydive to the earth would last about two minutes and collect huge amounts of data. It's a pricy operation but is very rewarding. We will start by calculating the orbital velocity of ISS. By multiplying the ISS speed of 22,446 miles per hour by the time it takes to complete an orbit, we get our speed at 19,425.4 miles per hour. That's cool but let's multiply it by 1.5 to give us an idea of how fast we're going during our skydive. 1.

At least two different types of TRPC channels are involved in the activation of a calcium- and diacylglycerol-sensitive phospholipase C in human platelets. Human platelets express several types of transient receptor potential (TRP) cation channels. Whether the pharmacological properties of TRP cation channels coincide with the signal transduction pathway activated by physiological stimuli in platelets is not known. Here we show that thapsigargin (TG)-sensitive $Ca(2+)$ stores that are depleted by store-operated $Ca(2+)$ entry (SOCE) through ORAI channels and that are mobilized by platelet stimulation of the Gq/11-coupled receptor agonist ADP activate inositol 1,4,5-trisphosphate (IP(3))-sensitive phospholipase C (PLC) in a pertussis toxin-insensitive manner, but whether these receptors are linked to the same type of TRP cation channels is unknown. Platelet activation by ADP also mobilizes TG-sensitive $Ca(2+)$ stores in ORAI1- and ORAI2-deficient platelets. Moreover, ADP-induced IP(3) production and phosphorylation of the PLC β 3 is attenuated in TRPC6- and TRPC5-deficient platelets, but not in TRPC1- or TRPC4-deficient platelets, indicating that both ORAI- and TG-sensitive $Ca(2+)$ stores activate IP(3) production via TRPC6. It is suggested that TG-sensitive $Ca(2+)$ stores are mobilized by SOCE through ORAI1/ORAI2 channels and that activation of both ORAI1/2 and TRPC6 may be involved in the activation of a diacylglycerol-sensitive PLCbeta3 by ADP in human platelets.
