Most folks don't even notice that it's here. Labor's been labor for the past eight years. The economy's been in a funk for the last two. Even if we turn back the clock to a time when a state government could be pro-labor, there's not enough energy, time and money, and the problem would be daunting. Now here we are eight years later. I don't like the chicanery of the Governor's Office of Business and Economic Development. And while we're at it, I'd like to see our unions shift focus from winning elections to securing a job. I don't think government's job is to defend public sector unions. They need to ask themselves why they need to protect such a tiny share of the economy. Our unions didn't need to be so alarmed of Scott Walker and the GOP's budget plans. They knew the public didn't support those plans. They knew the public didn't support their taxes and controls. The union contracts were politically vulnerable in the private sector, too. The state's small private sector couldn't afford the excessive costs of labor agreements. The private sector in Wisconsin has been getting away from excessive union costs for years now. Our unions spent way too much time and money on the Governor's race. They were counting on him to moderate his tone and to woo voters, as he did in 2014. Why not attract voters with less divisive candidates? After all, Walker won by 60
